Ilona Matkovszki

Ilona is in the Ph.D. program of the Department of Landscape Architecture. She specializes in landscape history and heritage management. Her primary interests are urban landscape history and the preservation of the built environment. She will conduct her dissertation research in three prominent historic Jewish quarters of East Central Europe – Budapest, Krakow, and Prague – where she will study the post-socialist revitalization of these landscapes and the roles and benefits of the local Jewish populations in these processes. Prior to entering the Ph.D. program in Landscape Architecture Ilona had earned BA and MA degrees in Anthropology at the University of Illinois and had worked for several years as an archaeologist in the United States and Europe.
